History of Award Winning Canalside Café
Formerly the 18th-century lock-keeper's cottage, Originally the cottage had tiny rooms and low beamed ceilings, open fires and a very large trunk used as a beam to hold part of the roof up!
The cottage is a grade 11 listed building c1770, a long history... As yet we have no explanation for the loud footsteps that have been clearly heard on more than numerous occasions starting from the bottom of the stairwell, climbing the stairs, sometimes moving about in the upstairs rooms and sometimes abruptly stopping just prior to reaching top... Various renovations have been carried out since 1997 to enable it to become a unique and quality café although much of the original cottage has been left untouched.
In the 1970's it was used in Birmingham's famous television series 'Crossroads' as the home of the character known as 'Stan Harvey' and also part of the filming of the 1960's Cliff Richard film 'Take me high' and many more television and film productions. Often a celebrity will drop in for a snack!
Relax and watch the world go by in this peaceful setting at the side of the canal - and there is always our open fire blazing away during the colder months in our slightly crooked chimney! It's hard to believe your in the heart of Birmingham!
